Wartime Prices and Trade Board

REAL SAVING — Adversity puts a good man on his feet. Judging by the reduced number of motor licenses thus far to persons wanting gasoline rationing cards, it looks as if many city motorists intend to keep their car in the garage for the duration of the war.

This is good news to the street railway and the traffic cops. It is especially good news to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board which has been urging patriotic Canadians to let the army, navy and airforce have first call on rubber, gasoline and other commodities essential to winning the war.

ROUGH ON HOARDERS — While men are risking death in horrible form to supply our war and urgent business needs for gasoline, it has come to the notice of officials of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board that some callous people with "fifth column" mentalities, tried to obtain gasoline for hoarding before the rationing regulations came into force.

Investigations are being made. Both hoarder and dealer, if convicted, run risk of fine and imprisonment. In addition, Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and supply, says he will have the tanks and pumps padlocked of any dealer found guilty of conniving with a hoarder.

It isn't only gasoline hoarding that is unpatriotic. Says Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, "Anybody who buys more than actual current requirements of any supply of any kind, unless encouraged to do so by a direct statement from a responsible official, is definitely a public enemy."

RUBBER RECLAIMED

A sweeping new order has further curtailed the use of rubber, reclaimed rubber this time, on the domestic front. This is a further indication of the critical situation of the rubber in Canada, and the vital necessity for every possible measure of salvage. This News Letter has already made note of many rubber sources. Several local committees have drawn attention to rubber fly swatters, typewriter key tips, and rubber date stamps and the like. Please send in any other sources, no matter how small, of "live" rubber which may be salvaged and reclaimed.

NEWS & HINTS

Brewery Products Ltd. of Winnipeg donate a truck driver to make 40 calls a week to pick up glass of all kinds. The truck contacts hotels, brewers, creameries, soft drink firms, bottling works. . . . The St. Catherine's Victory Rag Association reports that during February it picked up 178.145 lbs. of wastepaper and sold it for a little more than $1,500. . . . The Oliver Red Cross salvage Committee is the first in B. C. to ship a carload of mixed salvage to Vancouver under the newly granted rates. The car contained more than 25 tons of metals among other items. . . . A total of 384,974 lbs. of salvage material has been sent to the war factories by salvage workers in Fort William.

The snow will be leaving the farms soon, bringing to light all manner of bits and pieces of metal salvage. While the farmers are waiting for the land to dry sufficiently for them to work it is an opportunity for salvage committees in rural and small town areas. Get the "roundup" under way early this spring! Farms are rich sources of salvage, especially scrap iron and steel. Reports from Lumbarton, North Carolina, show that the collection of 421,647 lbs. of metal from 566 farms means an average of 758.3 lbs. per farm. There are about 700,000 farms in Canada, which means that something like 265,400 tons of scrap metal are waiting salvage according to the North Carolina figures. Any local salvage committee with information on the amount of salvage found on farms in their area should report same so that a further estimate may be made of the scrap available from this source. In every ton aerial bomb there are 500 lbs. of metal, in every howitzer there are 1,000 lbs. of steel, in every anti aircraft gun there are about 6,000 lbs. of it. The scrap on Canadian farms would make a lot of these war weapons.

Stettler, Alberta)

It has been brought to the attention of this office that because of the use of such heavy feeds as wheat, farmers felt that the addition of roughage in the form of ground hay, oat straw or alfalfa-hay mixture, would help to make it more palatable and more easily digested.

This practice has already proved to be costly for some of the farmers; losses were reported to be as high as 40 per cent.

It must be remembered that a pig's digestive system can not effectively make use of roughage over and above the percentage of bran and hulls found in feed grains and that in the case of weanling pigs it is absolutely essential that hulls be sifted out—otherwise serious damage in the form of acute inflammation will be done to the lining of the stomach and intestines. When this occurs, all other complications usually follow, resulting either in unthriftiness or a dead pig.

Ground hay or alfalfa which was moldy, or became so after grinding is poisonous to pigs and may be the cause of severe losses in swine herds and especially in young pigs.

However roughage can be fed in limited amounts to older pigs kept for breeding purposes. Alfalfa is the best roughage for this purpose and should be fed only in small ricks. Green oat sheaves might also be used in the same manner, or scattered loose on the ground.

It might be suggested that farmers who desire to provide proper kind of roughage should get in touch with their municipal office and obtain alfalfa seed at one half the cost price, which is now available under the Forage Crops Policy, and sow at least 4 or 5 acres of it next spring.

Where wheat constitutes a large part of ration it is very advisable to have it coarsely ground, or rolled. Wheat is known to be lacking in minerals and proteins, therefore it is essential that these be supplemented. Add from three-quarters to one pound of finely ground limestone and one pound of iodized salt to each 100 pounds of grain. Add 8 pounds of tankage to every 100 pounds of grain for pigs up to 130 pounds. If pigs are over this weight feed 5 or 6 pounds of tankage to each 100 pounds of grain. Where Protein Supplement is used, and it should be of the highest quality only, no other minerals nor salt must be added. Mix Protein Supplement as prescribed by manufacturer. Do Not Guess-weight all supplements and feed Do not over mineralize your pigs.

During fall and winter months it is profitable to give to pigs one tablespoonful per day of good quality Pilchardine in feed; suckling pigs should be started at the age of about 5 weeks, on one half teaspoonful daily, and increased gradually until one half teaspoonful is fed. Feed them in a separate creep. Research work has definitely proven that a pig's system cannot assimilate minerals unless Vitamin D is present. Also Vitamin A is very necessary in providing normal growth and resistance to various swine ration for fall and winter pigs.

Miss Phyllis Kidd of Alsaak is visiting this week with Emily Zawasky.
